MRS. DANA TRAGEDY A MYSTERY

Gerhard Note Proves German Hoax Story Was a Fake

TOWN ATTACHED

HELD FOR PARADE ATTACK

Three youths whom the police believe were members of the crowd that threw gravel on Governor Walsh and Mayor Curley, and hurled a bottle and other missiles at the horses of the Governor's carriage in the Bunker Hill Day parade, will be charged with assault and battery when arraigned in the Charlestown Court today. Other arrests are expected today.

John Dooley, William Healey and John Broderick are the young men arrested. Dooley is seventeen, Healey twenty-one and Broderick twenty-four. All live in the neighborhood.

Persons waiting for the parade had complained that they were being showered with gravel from a roof at the corner of Cottage and Bunker Hill streets, but the police were unable to catch the offenders in the act.

When the Governor's carriage passed, a shower of gravel landed in the carriage, and immediately after a whiskey bottle and a tumbler fell from the roof. The bottle hit one of the horses, making the pair unmanageable; the tumbler smashed into fragments under the horses' feet.

Richard Hale of Fitchburg, who had made three complaints to officers at the corner that the crowd on the roof were throwing things without being able to get any action, assisted in the arrest of Healey and Dooley and identified them as two who threw things at the Governor's carriage.

Turks Bombard Allies' Positions

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 18.—Continued bombardment of the Anglo-French positions on the Gallipoli peninsula by the Turks is reported in the following official statement issued by the War Office today:

"Our batteries on the Dardanelles Narrows bombarded the enemy positions near Sedd-el-Bahr again, throwing shells against the allies' artillery emplacements, their infantry camps and their ammunition transports. On the other fronts there is nothing to report."

State and County Get Out Papers Against Windham, N. H., for $19,000 Back Taxes.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., June 18.—Legal papers to levy on the property of the selectmen and citizens of the town of Windham for a total of $19,000 were handed to Sheriff Spinney today by State Treasurer J. W. Plummer and County Treasurer James L. Parker.

Windham owes the State $11,000 and Rockingham County $8,000 for taxes; and the selectmen and citizens are wondering where the money is coming from.

It came about through the brief legal residence in the town of J. F. Searles, a millionaire. Mr. Searles' residence, a replica of Kenilworth Castle to the last moat and turret, towers over the town. But legally his residence had been in Methuen till a years or so ago.

Then he had trouble with the tax collectors there and forthwith transferred his legal residence to Windham.

At once a $40,000 tax was levied on him in Windham and he paid. Then the trouble began.

The normal total taxes collected in Windham are about one-third of $40,000. The Selectmen, with so much extra money on hand, decided to improve the town, and they put in streets and sidewalks and roads in a fashion that Mr. Searles claimed was "wasteful."

While the money was being used for these purposes, the State and county tax levies, totalling $19,000, came along. And the money that might have paid them had gone into sidewalks.

To cap the climax, Mr. Searles again removed his legal residence from Windham. The town is left with a total tax revenue of $12,000 to $15,000—and facing a tax debt to State and county of $19,000.

This tax debt ran over till this year, when measures were taken to collect the money. It developed that the town was in no condition to pay. But the State and county wanted the money, and so today State Treasurer Plummer and County Treasurer Parker handed Sheriff Spinney the writs, or "events" as the legal phrase has it, to levy on the property of the selectmen and citizens of the town till the amount is paid.

The town, unable to meet the debt, appealed to the last Legislature, but Governor Spaulding and the Legislature refused to interfere.

"PERFECT BRIDE" IN TRAGEDY

The first shock in Boston and Cambridge today of the news that the body of Mrs. Jessie Holliday Dana, the "perfect bride," had been found floating near the harbor jetty at Nantucket was followed this afternoon by a general desire for more details of the mysterious tragedy.

The meagre reports of the case were to the effect that Mrs. Dana had been bathing in the surf alone very early yesterday morning and that her death was due to drowning, or perhaps to heart failure which settled her in the water. But the paucity of news from Nantucket concerning the sudden end of the brilliant young wife and mother made considerable mystery of the tragedy.

It was reported today that an autopsy would be held on Mrs. Dana's body.

Edmund Trowbridge Dana, husband of the "perfect bride" and grandson of the late Poet Longfellow, wired his father, Richard H. Dana of Cambridge, a brief message of young Mrs. Dana's death. The telegram gave the impression that heart failure may have been the primary cause of death.

WAS GOOD SWIMMER.

Mrs. Dana was a good swimmer, so far as her strength permitted, but her heart, according to her father-in-law, was weak.

Nevertheless, with the knowledge of this weak heart, Mrs. Dana evidently went out alone into the Nantucket surf for an early morning swim. That was at low tide, too.

Richard H. Dana, the father-in-law, has wired his son at Nantucket for more details. The elder Mr. Dana said today at his Cambridge home:

"I know nothing further than the press reports of my daughter-in-law's death. I received a short telegram from Nantucket and have wired for more information on the disposal of the body and so on.

"My daughter-in-law has been in poor health the last few months. Her circulation was bad and her heart never was strong. She was a fine swimmer, but she may have overtaxed herself."

MINER'S DAUGHTER.

Mrs. Dana was Jessie Holliday, the daughter of a prominent mine operator.

FRANK MAY LEARN HIS FATE TODAY

ATLANTA, Ga., June 18.—Leo M. Frank will hear today, or tomorrow at the latest, whether he is to be hanged Tuesday, or whether the desperate fight made for his life has been successful in securing commutation of his sentence to life imprisonment.

Since the close of the hearing, Governor Slaton has been carefully reviewing evidence and pleas. He announced today that his decision ought to be ready before this week ends.

Frank himself, nerves unshaken by the ordeal of suspense, remains reconciled with the day set for his hanging only four days away. He steadfastly clings to the belief that his innocence cannot fail to impress itself on Governor Slaton, and that the word from the Governor today will be his reprieve.

Colmar Attacked by French Airmen

PARIS, June 18.—French airmen attacked Colmar and Gebweiler in Alsace on Tuesday. Colmar is a link in the Rhine defenses of Germany. Gebweiler is southwest of Colmar, seventeen miles from the Rhine valley. Pamphlets bearing the following, were thrown down: "Alsatians Italy is helping crush Germany. Long live France and Alsace."

BIG TEUTON LOSS

ENVOY SEES LANSING ON 'HOAX' CASE

NEW YORK, June 18.—Gustav Stahl, German reservist, today was indicted by a Federal Grand Jury for perjury in connection with his affidavit that the Cunard liner Lusitania carried guns.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, had an engagement today for a conference with Secretary Lansing at the State Department to personally decry the accuracy of published reports that a safe conduct obtained for Mr. Anton Meyer-Gerhard had been used to return to Europe by Mr. Alfred Meyer, a German purchasing agent of war munitions. The charge d'affaires of the German embassy at Cedarhurst, L. I., has made a general denial of the published charges of deception.

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 18.—Captain Ewald Hecker, head of the German Red Cross in this country, has produced a letter he says proves the falsity of the story that the Dr. Anton Meyer-Gerhard, who recently visited the United States, was in fact Dr. Alfred Meyer, of the Berlin War Office, who came here to buy war supplies.

Captain Hecker said:

"There was a facsimile letter just published, which was signed by the mysterious Dr. A. Meyer-G. It was dated New York, March 3, 1915.

"It accordingly occurred to me to ascertain the whereabouts of Dr. Meyer-Gerhard. After a week, not looking through my files, I found a private letter from Dr. Meyer-Gerhard of that very same date. It was written entirely in his own handwriting, signed Meyer-Gerhard, and mailed to me from the Germania Club, Jacksonville, Fla.

"This letter, you know, not even the slightest doubt that Dr. Meyer-Gerhard was not in New York, but in Florida on match's the day when he is alleged to have signed here in New York the fake document just published.

"The document to which Captain Hecker referred was signed by Dr. A. Meyer and purported to guarantee commission to Mrs. Edma Lewis on a $1,250,000 sale of King rifles, if the sale was consummated with the United States Government.

Captain Hecker translated the letter and one of his Meyer-Gerhard letter as follows:

Germania Club, Jacksonville, Fla., March 3, 1915.

My dear Captain:—I am sincerely delighted to hear from your grateful letter.

My address states on page 1 will remain the same until further notice. I hope that you are quite well again.

Most sincerely yours,
MEYER-GERHARD.

Compare this signature of Meyer-Gerhard with that on the register of the Ritz Carlton," said Captain Hecker, "and you will see that both are by the same handwriting.

HANDWRITING DISSIMILAR.

"Contrast with the Dr. Meyer of Mrs. Lewis' contract and they are facts totally dissimilar.

"Mr. Lewis must have been in collusion with the Germans. He was to receive $25,000 for his part in the deal. Mrs. Lewis was to receive $10,000 for her part. Mr. Lewis was to receive $15,000 for his part. Mr. Lewis was to receive $15,000 for his part. Mr. Lewis was to receive $15,000 for his part.

120,000 Men Lost By Austro-Germans, Petrograd Says; Russian Victory.

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY, Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PETROGRAD, June 18.—An official statement showing the staggering price in human life the Austro-Germans have paid for their recent victories in Galicia was issued today by the Russian War Office.

The Austro-German losses in one month over a 40-mile battle front in Galicia are estimated by the Russian War Office at from 120,000 to 150,000 men.

A decisive check has been inflicted upon the Austro-German army by the Russians in the Dniester River sphere of operations between the Uszkowiecz and Styrj Rivers. The War Office announced today that in the great battle above Jurasnow, Zurawno on the night of June 14-15, the Russian captured 8,334 men, 262 officers, 4 cannon, 31 rapid fire guns, many ammunition caissons and other booty.

An Austro-German column that crossed the Dniester near Nizniow was destroyed. The regular of German attacks along the line on the Pruth is also reported.

ATTACKS REFUSED.

The text of the official statement follows:

"In the Bzuzh district and west of the middle Niemen River there is nothing of especial importance to report. All the Germans attacks on Tuesday were repulsed but fighting continues. There was no fighting on the Narew River front (Poland) during the day.

"On the Bzura river, north of Sochaczew (Poland), we repulsed a number of attacks of small German forces yesterday.

"The battle continues on the Dniester front. A severe engagement occurred on Tuesday between the san River and the town of Lubaczow, and also in the region of Krasnowiec.

CHILDREN RESCUED AT FIRE

An early morning fire threatened the lives of forty men, women and children at No. 141 H street, South Boston, today. It was reported later that signs were found that the fire had been deliberately set.

Investigation was begun by firemen and police. It was said that firemen found traces of oil and oil-soaked paper in rags on the main stairway leading to the upstairs tenements.

Smoke rose in dense clouds from the stairway and mounted so quickly to upper floors that tenants fled in all stages of undress. Five children were carried out bodily by the first firemen on the scene.

The building is a three story double frame structure. Firemen estimated the damage at $100.

The fire was discovered by patrolmen Bennett and Sullivan, who sent in a still alarm. Firemen James Stout, Joseph Moran and John Devine, of Chemical 8, who arrived first, found the front stairway choked with smoke. Tenants aroused by the police were hurrying out. Some were partly dressed. Others had wrapped sheets or other bedclothing around them. The three chemical men took down three children from the tenement of Mr. and Mrs. Tomas Lagos on the second floor. They were Anthony, four; Orlando, five, and Thomas, one year.

From the tenement of Mr. and Mrs. John Trafino on the third floor the rescuers brought down John Trafino, Jr., four, and Mary, two.

Other firemen assisted other tenants and the building was rapidly cleared. Meanwhile chemical streams were directed on what fire there was.

RUSSIANS AGAIN CHECK TEUTONS

on the Sklo River, twenty-three miles southeast of Jaroslau.

"On the Dniester front, in the sector between the Tyssmienica and Stryj Rivers, on the night of June 13-14, the enemy was thrown back in disorder. Our captures on the Dniester front above Zurawno on the night of June 14-15 amounted to 8,544 men, 202 officers, six cannon, twenty-one rapid fire guns, ammunition caissons and many other booty.

COLUMN DESTROYED.

"On Tuesday the enemy crossed the Dniester from the west to the east bank, both above and below Nizniow. The column which crossed above the town was destroyed by flanking attack that closed below the town. Fighting continues in that region. In the direction of Halicz, Russia, between the Pruth and Dniester rivers, we pressed back the enemy, who was trying to advance."

A supplementary statement says:

"A great battle developed on a forty-mile front between the Tyssmienica and Swica Rivers, where six Austro-German armies were hurled against the Russians. This battle has continued to spread since it started. The chief significance of the operations along the Stryj River lies in the fact that the Austro-Germans were trying to turn our flank. Our front was opposed at the centre by the Prussian army under General von Mackensen.

"On May 14 the Austro-German army closely following our troops which were retiring from the Carpathians, met our troops on the region east of Drohobycz, Stryj and Bolechow.

"From May 10 the enemy brought into action all his forces, but at the end of two days' fighting he was compelled to abandon his offensive progress and lost ten of thousands of men. His only success was in the flats of Rohatyn was the turning of our right wing near Stenatyn.

"During the next week we remained inoffensive, confining ourselves for the climax in the battle which was rapidly reached.

ENORMOUS COST.

"At the end of the fifth day of the engagement a powerful force composed of three German divisions, succeeded at an incredible cost in a continuous sacrifice of human life to carry Stryj.

"Perceiving the exhaustion of the Austrians on the right wing of the attacking army we assumed the offensive and drove them back on May 30, 31 and June 1.

"Grand Duke Nicholas the Russian commander-in-chief, was undecided whether to attempt to turn the German wing that had broken our front at Stryk or to fall back upon the Dniester. The general situation in Galicia enabled us to adopt the latter course.

"On the night of June 2 the enemy made a demonstration against our bridgeheads in the direction of Mikolajow, losing several thousands of men.

"The principal attack was delivered by the Bohmer army (General Boem-Ermolli's army), which struck eastward. The attack against Zydaczow was repulsed, but on the night of June 6 the Austro-Germans crossed the Dniester near Zurawno, and towards June 8 held the eastern bank for a distance of 13 miles.

RUSHED BACK OVER RIVER.

"On June 8 and 9 the bulk of the German forces suffered a decisive defeat and were thrown back across Dniester.

"On June 10 the enemy began a new offensive with the reunion of regiments, the chief attacks being directed along the right bank of the Stryj river and against the bridgehead near Zydaczow. Towards June 11 the enemy again suffered repulses at Berezdziwka and Krulewska. With the bayonet alone our troops killed 4,000 Germans, who had abused the white flag by firing after raising it.

"In this sector between May 29 and June 12 we captured about 10,000 men and 160 officers, over 100 rapid fire guns and more than 24 machine guns.

"The total losses of the enemy on the front of forty miles in one month is placed at between 120,000 and 150,000 men.

"Dense additional columns have passed through the Carpathians and are daily reinforcing the enemy. Many supplementary elements, only finally destined for East Prussia, met their fate in the valley of the Stryj. Other units were thrown into the fighting before they reached the positions to which they had been ordered. Serious symptoms of demoralization are now apparent in the enemy's ranks."

GIRL SAYS FATHER BEAT HER MOTHER

Marion Nordstrom, the twelve-year-old daughter of Mrs. Ella D. Nordstrom, testified in the divorce court today before Judge Wait that she saw her father beat her mother. Marion testified:

"I saw my father strike my mother in the face and I saw her wrists. I also saw my father throw a glass of water at her. He often would come late at 12 o'clock and pull my mother out of bed and make her get him some supper.

"One time he took me away with him and I could not get home for three days. He took me to some relatives. I was kept in all day and not allowed to go out. He would often beat me with a belt when I tried to stop him from beating my mother.

"I often got supper for my father when my mother was away.

Q—Did you always obey your father? A—No, sir.

Q—Did your mother tell you to obey your papa? A—Yes, sir.

Q—Did you always obey your mother? A—No, sir.

Judge Wait with a smile on his face said:

"That's very natural, my child."

Patrolman Fred H. Sullivan of the Dorchester station said he was called in to see Mrs. Nordstrom and found her with a bruised arm and a mark upon her face. He also found the telephone demolished.

Wilson Aide Wins Heiress in Elopement

WASHINGTON, June 18.—"I am willing to sacrifice my inheritance," said Mrs. Sullivan to Secretary Tumulty on her arrival here after her elopement from Lakewood, N. J., with Thomas C. Sullivan, one of the secretary's assistants.

The bride was Miss Louise Foster Lynch, daughter of Jasper Lynch of Lakewood, worth $2,000,000. Mrs. Lynch refused to consent to the marriage.

"I don't know whether mother will forgive me or not, but love is supreme," she added.

Sullivan, a White House stenographer, and his bride had planned the wedding for two years or more. They kept their plans so secret that no one in Lakewood suspected they intended to marry, and Secretary Tumulty was surprised when, in response to a telegram from Sullivan, he met the eloping pair here at a railroad station.

ORDER INQUIRY ON MAIL CHARGES

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—A thorough investigation today was ordered by the State Department into the charges filed by the Swedish minister that mail from the United States addressed to Sweden repeatedly has been opened and censored while in transit across England.

Whether official mail from the Swedish legation in Washington to the Swedish Foreign Office in Stockholm has been violated is still under investigation by the Swedish authorities. The legation admitted today that it was not certain whether official communications had been tampered with.

Boston Falls Before Attack of Gen. Humidity

The Weather Man, sticking to his guns today while everyone else is sticking to his chair—the humidity having reached 94—says: "The day is nothing unusual, the temperature is only 76."

But the Weather Man is in splendid isolation. To the man in the street and in the office today is one of those "rare" June days full of perspiration and vexation. Collars and ambition are wilted.

It is one of those days when the armchair lunch rooms push crackers and milk instead of beef stew, and the handsomt clerks at the fountains see what they can do that is new with some ice cream and a few dabs of this and that.

In the words of the baseball reporter: "In the eighteenth. Humidity came to bat for Temperature and hit one over the fence. Citizen kicked himself out of the game."

STAMFORD, Ct., June 18.—Mrs. Emily Trowbridge Gallatin, daughter of the late Edwin D. Trowbridge of Noroton, was married at her house in Noroton to John S. Garvin of Hartford by the Rev. Carlin Martyn, pastor of the Noroton Presbyterian Church. The couple are to reside in Hartford on their return from an extended trip. Mrs. Gallatin obtained a divorce from her first husband, Frederick Gallatin, Jr., on May 21. Her engagement to Mr. Garvan was announced soon afterward. She is wealthy in her own right.

WHAT TO DO FOR ITCHING SKINS

Eczema, ringworm and other itching, burning skin eruptions are easily made worse by improper treatment that one has to be very careful. There is one method, however, that you need not hesitate for, even on a baby's tender skin—that is, the resinol treatment. Resinol is the prescription of a Baltimore doctor, put up in the form of resinol ointment and resinol soap. This proved so remarkably successful that thousands of other physicians have been prescribing it constantly for 20 years.

Resinol stops itching instantly, and almost always heals the eruption quickly and at little cost. Resinol ointment and resinol soap can be bought at any druggist's and are not at all expensive.—Advertisement.

FRENCH CONTINUE FIERCE ATTACK

PARIS, June 18.—The French today continued their attack north of Arras, throwing against the German lines a weight of shell unequalled heretofore in the western theatre of war.

The official announcement said 300,000 shells were thrown in one day's battling. This would mean, it is estimated, a minimum of 1,000 cannon in action.

These figures are exceeded only by those of the early May battles in Galicia, when the Germans parked 4,000 guns to blot out an opposing section of the Russian line.

The French do not state how many men were engaged on their side. They say eleven German divisions were involved. A German infantry division before the war had a strength of 12,000 men; thus the German forces rolled back by the French attack would approach a total of 150,000 men.

While the French were busy north of Arras the British were attacking near al. Bassee. The line from Ypres to Arras was practically one continuous battle.

The French during the past weeks have pushed back the German line here a distance varying from two to six miles, along a short front. Most of the fighting has occurred on the six-mile front between Souchez and Arras.

In the battling of the past few days 600 German prisoners have been taken.

Souchez, though held by the German, is surrounded except on the northeast. The road to Givenchy, which runs northeast and then turns at right angles southward, is still in German hands. German reserves are at Givenchy, where French aviators bombarded them.

The French objective would seem to be to cut the German communications behind the present lines, and to make a drive on Lille.

Lille is about twenty miles northeast of Souchez, with Lens lying between.

Souchez is six and a half miles north of Arras.

LONDON, June 18.—Sir Edwin A. Cornwall, Liberal member for Bethnal Green, in the House remarked he had been informed three of the present ministers had secretaries of German origin.

ITALIANS SMASH GORITZ DEFENCES

By International News Service.

ROME, June 18.—Occupation of Goritz (Gorizia) by the Italians is imminent, according to Geneva advices today. The Austrian defences are being smashed to piece by the Italian artillery.

Emperor William's Italian villa at Frascati, twelve miles from Rome, has been confiscated by the Italian government.

The Austrian fleet today shelled Fano, a noted watering place on the Adriatic, inflicting severe damage. Fano is about ninety miles from Pola, the Austrian naval base.

The annihilation of a Hungarian battalion by the Italians in bloody fighting around Planinapolle, northeast of Monte Nero, in the Carnic Alps, is officially reported today.

More than 600 prisoners, including thirty officers, have been taken by the Italians in the Monte Nero zone of operations.

The following is the text of the Italian official communique:

"On the frontiers of Trent and Tyrol there have been a number of small encounters resulting in our favor.

"A detachment of Austrians, advancing from Rovereto in the Adige valley, was attacked and defeated near Zugna.

OCCUPY THREE TOWNS.

"We have occupied Sasso and Albergo and Palanzago in the Costeana valley, taking thirty prisoners.

"On the Carnia front the artillery duel is increasing in violence.

"We dismounted several Austrian guns with our fire and dispersed working parties that were straightening the Austrian works. Columns of Austrians upon the march were broken up by our fire.

"Although a strong wind has hampered aerial observation we have been able to determine the destruction done by our guns at the fortress of Malborghetto. Our shells caused a fire in the passageway connecting the lower and upper works. The gun platform of a covered battery was seriously damaged.

"Late advices from the front continue to enhance the brilliancy of the attack made by our men in the Monte Nero zone on the night of the 16th. The assault was carried out under great difficulties and the men were subjected to a fierce cannonade. 600 prisoners have been taken. We also captured a great many rifles and two mitrailleuses.

ANNIHILATE BATTALION.

"On Wednesday afternoon a Hungarian battalion made a violent attack upon our position at Zakrale in the Monte Nero zone of hostilities from the direction of Planinapolje, but was repulsed. Counter attacks by the Italians resulted in the annihilation of the Hungarians.

"Along the Isonzo River front no offensive is doing great work. Our troops advancing in the vicinity of Plava, occupied a great deal of territory after a long and sanguinary conflict. Our new positions have been consolidated, and all counter attacks repelled.

"At other points on the Isonzo River front, only long distant artillery duels are taking place.

"The railway station at Goritzia has been partly destroyed by our projectiles and a string of railways cars were set on fire and burned in the resultant conflagration."

Unofficial dispatches from Udine state that the Italians are already attacking the Austrian outposts of Trieste.

LONDON, June 13.—Lord Milner heads a committee appointed by the Earl of Selborne as president of the Board of Agriculture to see what can be done to increase food production in Great Britain on the assumption that the war may be prolonged beyond the harvest of 1916.

Nahant Steamer in Crash with Schooner

The steamer Mascognosse of the Nahant line collided with the fishing schooner Tacomah off spectacle island in a thick fog. The latter lost her bowsprit in the collision, but no one was injured on either boat. There were few passengers on the Nahant boat.

"I Don't Worry About Carpentier. He Began Fighting Too Young"

Exercise Is Necessary, but It Must Be in Moderation---"Condition" a Word of Deep Significance in Any Great Effort.

By Jess Willard.

(Copyright, 1915, by A. Merritt. All Rights Reserved.)

WHEN I sold my business and took up prize-fighting as a trade I was twenty-three years old. Some people may think I was a little late. I don't agree with them. I am glad I didn't start any earlier.

Hundreds of athletes have been ruined by beginning too soon. A man's bones don't get good and hard until he's past eighteen. The bones in a boy of sixteen are still soft. His heart and his lungs aren't ready yet for big work.

That's why I get mad when I see youngsters going into these Marathon races. There's no telling how many of them come out with weak hearts and wrenched tendons. It's the same way in the prize ring. I know of any number of fighters who might have been champions if they had waited for their bones to harden and their muscles to grow properly.

Let a kid exercise by all means, but any boy who starts into real athletic work before he's eighteen is a fool, and his father's a still bigger one.

Keep away from cigarettes and keep away from drink. Chew your food until your jaws ache. If you had a nice fire going, you wouldn't throw in coal until you smothered it, would you? That's what you do to your digestion when you swallow food without chewing it.

Fat doesn't come from eating too much. It comes from chewing too little. A hog gets fat because he doesn't use his teeth.

Stay out in the open air as much as you can. Breathe deep. The best training in the world is to fill your lungs and then hold your breath as long as you can. It doesn't take any gymnasium to do it, either.

And brush your teeth after every meal! I couldn't see any sense in it when I was a boy, but my mother made me do it. Now I know that 75 per cent of all sickness comes from bad teeth.

Keep tobacco and whiskey out of your system; chew your food, brush your teeth, breathe deep, and take moderate exercise in the open air. Any boy that does these things will be ready for any sort of hard athletic work when he gets to be eighteen or nineteen.

Some day I may have to fight Georges Carpentier, the Frenchman. He's a soldier now fighting for his country. I am sorry for him just as I am sorry for all the other thousands of poor devils who are taking part in that awful business of killing. May it end soon!

But if ever I do fight Carpentier I will enter the ring absolutely certain of victory. He began fighting when he was thirteen years old. That's too soon. No matter how successful he has been, I know that his heart has been paying the price.

Some fellows that fought in the days when I was a boy could stand it. Fitzsimmons was one of them. He was a skinny, bony fellow, but he had a heart that was as big as a house. He was a middleweight champion at thirty-five, and he was still fighting when he was forty-two.

Corbett was another. He was a bank clerk when he began fighting, and he was a champion at twenty-one. He was a boxer, and he kept his body in fine shape, but he never had to train hard. He was a champion before he had to.

Jeffries was a big, strong fellow who had to train hard and work hard to get himself in shape. He was a champion at twenty-three, but he was a man grown, and he had been working hard for years.

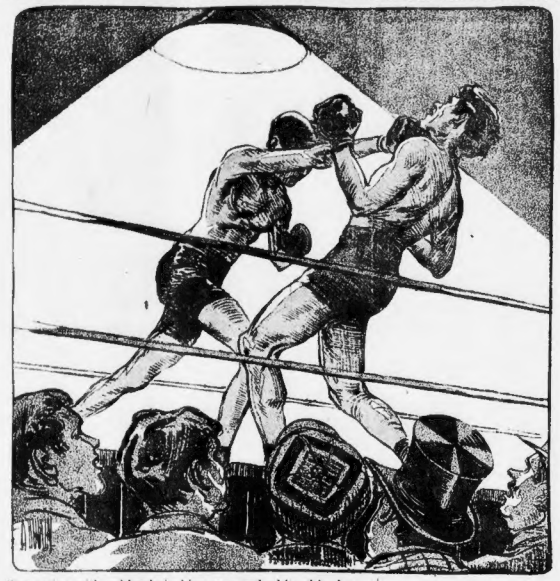
Fitzsimmons, Corbett and Jeffries were champions before they were thirty. Ruhlin was champion at thirty-two. Ketchel was champion at twenty-three. Langford was champion at twenty-two. Johnson was champion at twenty-five. Moran was champion at twenty-three.

Not one of these men began fighting before he was eighteen. Not one of them was champion before he was twenty-one. Not one of them was champion before he was twenty-three.

Carpentier began fighting when he was thirteen years old. He was champion at twenty-two. He is champion now at twenty-three.

Carpentier is a wonder. He is a marvel. He is a genius. He is a boy who began fighting too young.

I don't worry about Carpentier.



Carpentier, with golden hair, blue eyes and white skin, has the features of a girl. He is here shown knocking out Bombardier Wells.

Frenchman Went Into Ring Before Bones and Muscles Had Grown Properly.

Frances were telling me all about Carpentier one day. His story sounds like a dime novel. His father was a French miner, and little Georges began to work as a pit-boy before he was ten. The family was very poor, and the kid got about $1.50 a week that he gave to his mother.

He saw a circus one day and he wanted to be an acrobat. There was a sort of gymnasium in his town, and he got to hanging about there at nights. The proprietor also taught boxing and one night little Carpentier begged to put on the gloves.

He was a natural boxer. Cleverness was an instinct with him. The man saw it, and had Georges quit work in the mines. He paid the father the money that the boy had been earning. Then he began training him and teaching him, and when the boy was only thirteen years old he had his first professional fight.

There's no question about his being a wonder. They tell me that people almost cried when they saw him step into the ring the first time. He had golden hair and blue eyes and white skin, and looked like a nice, pretty little girl.

But he had a heart in him like a lion! That thirteen-year-old boy went eighteen rounds with one of the toughest propositions in France, and although his seconds threw up the sponge, he wasn't knocked out. He just wore out!

At fifteen he was fighting as a bantamweight. At sixteen he was a lightweight, at seventeen a welter, at eighteen a middleweight, and when he was nineteen he entered the heavyweight division. You see, the boy was fighting all the time that he was growing. And while the ring work may not have stopped his height and weight, I'm telling you that it did stop his heart and his lungs.

Look at all of Carpentier's fights and you'll see that he's short of endurance. He can't go the distance. His seconds had to throw up the sponge for him in the nineteenth round, when he fought Frank Klaus.

He whipped Billy Papke in the first ten rounds, but after that he began to peter out, and the sponge had to be tossed for him again. No endurance! Before his heart was ready for hard work he was calling on it to do terrific pumping.

Every violent motion puts a strain on the heart. When you hit a man, it's the fist that travels, but it's the heart that furnishes the power for the fist.

That is why whiskey and tobacco are death to a fighter. It makes the heart do double work, trying to throw off the poison and run the body at the same time.

Carpentier's victory over Bombardier Wells doesn't mean anything. If Wells lives a thousand years he'll never be a fighter. Steve O'Donnell and Bob Armstrong were like him. They were champions in the training quarters, but something happened to them when they got into the ring.

I reckon it must be that they haven't got the feeling that they're going to win. Confidence is nine-tenths of every battle, no matter whether it's in a ring or outside. The fellow who isn't sure of himself is always easy to whip.

Coming back to my own story, I hit Oklahoma City when I was twenty-three. All I knew was that I wanted to be champion of the world. A man named J. D. Brock was running a club there, and I went right off to see him.

"Think you can whip Johnson, do you?" he grinned.

"Not today maybe," I said. "But I will some day."

"Well," he said, "you're certainly some human box-car. I'll give you a try-out, my boy, so you can know what a licking feels like before you go back to your mules."

There was a big fellow named Fink in the neighborhood, and he was the man they picked out for me. Brock told me I had better go to work and get in shape. I told him I was in shape, and he laughed.

Thank the Lord, I happened to see a real prize fight before I got into the ring with Fink. In the first place, I saw what kind of clothes fighters wore. If it hadn't been for that, I reckon, I would have gone in with just my coat off and my pants turned up.

The bout I went to was between Harry Brewer and Clarence English. While neither one of them was a champion, they were good, fast boys, and they put up a slashing fight for ten rounds. As I sat there, watching them, my heart went down into my shoes.

The way they danced around and fiddled with their hands fairly dazzled me. I saw them step blows with their gloves and with their arms, and I saw them duck swings. It was all so fast I couldn't follow it very close, but I saw enough to make me know that there was more to fighting than I had ever thought.

It didn't discourage me, though. I just made up my mind I'd have to work a little harder. I also got some satisfaction at hearing the men around me talk about "condition."

"Harry's in fine condition," one said.

"Clarence seems to be getting tired," another piped up.

I knew that I was always in fine condition and that I would never get tired. And since those two things seemed to be the most important I figured that I could get the cleverness by hard work.

The first thing I did after that fight was to buy me a gymnasium suit and some boxing shoes. The second thing was to hurry up to the gymnasium and see if I couldn't get somebody to box with me. But I was too much of a joke for anybody to bother with. So I herded off by myself and started pulling at the weight machines lined along the wall.

If I were fixing up a gymnasium today I wouldn't give an inch of room to these pulley business or any other mechanical apparatus. I don't believe that exercise is worth a rap unless it works up some interest in a fellow.

Do something that makes you grit your teeth. If you haven't got a fellow to wrestle or box with, try to walk on your hands or learn a tumbling trick. Punch a bag and see how many times you can hit it without making a bobble.

Or skip a rope. I don't know of any better light training in the world than rope skipping. It gives you speed and wind and balance.

I didn't know any of these things then, though. So after I decided that pulling the weight machines was stupid I left the gymnasium and took up walking. When I'd get out of sight of the town I'd do a little running. But I didn't need much training. I was in perfect shape as I stood.

When I entered the ring with Fink on the night of February 15, 1911, I felt as if I could throw a horse over my shoulder.

CALL DR. STRONG FOR GREEK KING

Cable dispatches from Athens today announce that Dr. Richard Pearson Strong of the Harvard Medical School has been called into consultation by the physicians attending the King of Greece, who is gravely ill.

Dr. Strong was in Sir Thomas Lipton's party, aboard the yacht Erin, which went to Serbia to study typhus and strive to stamp it out.

The Erin arrived in Athens today, and Dr. Strong was immediately asked to join the consultation of the King's physicians. He was called by personal invitation of the Queen.

Dr. Strong is head of the Department of Tropical Medicine at Harvard. He was awarded a Ph. B. at Yale in 1892 and an M. D. at Johns Hopkins in 1897.

In 1912, Dr. Strong returned from a journey to South America, where he made remarkable studies of tropical diseases. He made the sensational report that the authorities of Ecuador and Peru foster tropical diseases there to keep out foreigners. He mentioned the "uta" disease as particularly fatal to foreigners. He said Lima, Peru, was the most unhealthful city in the world next to Guayaquil. Regarding the latter city, he reported:

"Never have I found such fearful conditions as here."

Dr. Strong has studied in the pest holes of China and India and is an authority on tropical diseases of all kinds.

Middies Think Accused Seven Are the Goats

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 18.—Highly interesting opinions of midshipmen on "scribbling" and "dope" on advance information on examinations were given today before the Court of Inquiry which is investigating those matters at the naval academy.

"Is it not the general impression among the Midshipman regiment that the seven original defendants were picked by the former investigation board to be 'goats'?" asked Congressman Carlin of Midshipman H. M. Mullinix, a witness.

"It is," was the reply.

Mullinix testified that J. K. Davis and W. E. Mackay did not study the advance questions which were generally circulated because they thought these "might be really a part of the examination."

Sailors Fail to Fight Policemen

A report came to Chief James E. White of the Chelsea police that a number of enlisted men from the Charlestown navy yard were on their way to give battle to the members of his department, so he called a number of men from outlying routes into Chelsea square, and held them there until early today. No sailors appeared and the policemen were dismissed.

Bar Spooning in Foxboro Jitneys

If Too Fat Get More Fresh Air

Be Moderate in Your Diet and Reduce Your Weight with Oil of Korein.

Lack of fresh air weakens the oxygen-carrying power of the blood, the liver becomes sluggish, fat accumulates and the action of many of the vital organs are hindered thereby. The heart action becomes weak, work is an effort and the beauty of the figure is destroyed.

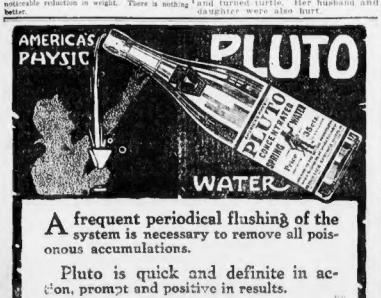
Fat and no fat indoor life is unhealthy, and if nature is not assisted in throwing it off by increasing oxygen-carrying power of the blood a serious case of obesity may result.

When you feel that you are getting too stout, take the matter in hand at once, don't wait until your figure has become a joke and your health ruined through carrying around a burden of unsightly and unhealthy fat.

Breed as much time as you possibly can in the open air, together with and get from any druggist a box of oil of korein capsules; take one after each meal and one before retiring at night.

Weigh yourself every few days and keep up the treatment until you are down to normal. Oil of korein is absolutely harmless, is pleasant to take, helps the digestion, and is designed to increase the oxygen-carrying power of the blood.

Even a few days' treatment should show a noticeable reduction in weight. There is nothing better.



A frequent periodical flushing of the system is necessary to remove all poisonous accumulations.

Pluto is quick and definite in action, prompt and positive in results.

Gives Alarm for Fire, Is Almost Arrested

Believing that he had sounded a false alarm and doubting his story that there was an electric car afire and that he had sounded an alarm at the request of the motorman early today, the police were just starting for the police station with Eugene Schwender, an architect, with an office at No. 181 Devonshire street, and living on Corey street, West Roxbury, when the claims he made were proven by Deputy Chief John O. Taber of the Fire Department. It appears that after he had sounded the alarm, the motorman drove the car from Washington street to Franklin street, where, with the assistance of the conductor, the blaze was extinguished.

tein North Wales. Before she met ung Dana at a Socialist school in gland which Dana attended during s exile from Harvard, she had at- tained some prominence as a por- trait painter.

Their attachment, commenced in this Socialist school, became known first, when Miss Holliday came to this country and visited with Dana's parents in Cambridge.

It was an unusual announcement of their forthcoming marriage that put the couple prominently into the news. It was to be an "ethical mar- riage." Both the young folks were not only willing, but eager, to tell just what they meant.

The bride-to-be announced that she loved the grandson of the poet Long- fellow "because he neither drank nor smoked, was a Socialist, and did not believe in doing all the fussing around the house."

They were married in the summer of 1912 on the lawn back of the old Longfellow mansion in Brattle street, Cambridge. The "ethical" form of marriage which they adopted was as simple as to be hardly a ceremony at all.

Clad in white, with heads bare, the couple stood at a small table on which Longfellow used to write. About them was a hedge of growing flowers. There were no attendants nor any of the other conventions usually attendant on weddings.

Attorney Edward S. Parker, a jus- tice of the peace and a close friend of the Danas, attended to the legal formalities, which were the only for- malities about the whole wedding.

The ethical part was an exchange of rings. Dana gave his bride a plain gold band and received from her a wide silver ring. Each of the fifteen guests received, not a hunk of indi- gestible wedding cake, but a Fabian tract on Socialism, neatly wrapped in tissue paper.

The couple remained in Cambridge a week or so after the marriage and then went to Chicago, where they underwent a "fast" at McFadden's physical culture establishment. Dana lasted seventeen days without solid food, and the "ethical bride" went forty. Both had proclaimed that they were opposed to a meat diet, but in- sisted that they were "fruitarians" rather than "vegetarians" exclusive- ly. Soon after their return to Cam- bridge from Chicago they separated.

DANA AS CONDUCTOR.

Mrs. Dana journeyed to England to visit her parents, and young Dana went job hunting. This separation was just about four months after the "ethical" wedding. They both gave vigorous denial to the gossip that the "ethical" marriage had already devel- oped rifts.

Dana dropped completely from sight then, until months after he was accidentally discovered working for the Bay State Street Railway as a conductor, earning good weeks, al- most fourteen per. And he kept a diary, which was published in a Sun- day paper.

About the time that Mrs. Dana re- turned from her trip to England, Dana found that collecting fares was too spiritually cramping and gave it up. They set up housekeeping again in Cambridge at No. 105 Brattle street, a few doors from the Long- fellow mansion. And Dana became a reporter.

At the first of the year, in 1914, Dana was offered a position as pro- fessors of philosophy and education at Washington College, Chestertown, Md. He accepted and they went there to live.

THE SHAVIAN BABY

It was during their vacation at Beverly, in 1914, that their baby, "Shaw Dana," was born. He was named in honor of Bernard Shaw.

The announcement of the birth read:

Jessie H. and Edmund T. Dana announce the birth of their son, Shaw Dana, July 6, 1914, at Bev- erly, Massachusetts, U. S. A.

"A child is an experiment. A fresh attempt to produce the just man made perfect—to make hu- manly divine. And you will vis- ualize the experiment if you at- tempt to abort it into some fancy figure of your own. Every child has a right to its own bent.

"Bernard Shaw."

He will be given a chance at in- dividualism, announced the proud father, "he'll develop into a man of his own making—a real man—not a parrot nor a pattern from the com- mon mould."

Their ideas about the upbringing of little Shaw Dana were no more radical than the other unconven- tional ideas they had proclaimed in their interviews.

The marriage ceremony, by which they were married and which was composed by Mrs. Dana, set a fashion for weddings among Socialists, and became known here as "the Socialist form" than the "ethical form."

Chicago Plans 'Opera Boycott' for Miss Farrar

Empty boxes, the result of an "opera boycott," may greet Ger- aldine Farrar, the Yankee song- bird, when she opens the Chicago grand opera season, according to dispatches received in Boston to- day.

If a boycott materializes, it will be because of pro-German utterances credited to Miss Far- rar, it is said.

In this connection it is inter- esting to note that Miss Farrar has spent much time in Germany and is said to have been made much of by members of the Ger- man reigning family. There was rather more than one time that she was engaged to the Crown Prince.

deranged stomach, which can be restored to its normal condition by Plant Juice, the herbal system tonic. Daily testimonials are received from prominent local people testi- fying how they have been restored to health by the use of Plant Juice. Recently the signed statement was received from Mrs. Hattie Irving, who resides at No. 16 Court street, Woburn, Mass., and who was born and reared in Woburn, and is a well-known lady there. She said:

"I had suffered from stomach trouble, indigestion, dyspepsia and dizzy spells for the past fifteen years. I had it so bad that I used to go into spasms with pains in my stomach after eating; even a cup of tea would distress me. I could not partake of any food that was good. I had to eliminate vegetables and meats from my diet. What- ever food I did eat would ferment in my stomach. I was very ner- vous and restless at night and could not sleep well. I had a torpid liver, and my skin was as yellow as saffron. I have only used one bottle of Plant Juice, and I can now say that I can eat any kind of food. I have no more aches or pains, sleep well, and am not ner- vous or restless. I certainly can recommend Plant Juice to anyone who suffered as I did. It has cured me, and I am now giving it to my daughter."

The Plant Juice man is at the Liggett Drug Store, corner of Washington and Avon streets, where he daily meets the local public and introduces and explains the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

Terrible Itching and Burning, Would Scratch Scalp in Sleep. Hair Fell Out Gradually. Used Cuticura. Scalp Well in Two Months.

20 Broadway, Rockport, Mass.—"Mother had small spots on the back of her head and inside of two weeks they spread, completely covering the scalp. There was terrible itching and burning. She would scratch her scalp in her sleep. It was pronounced eczema. She had a heavy head of hair which fell out gradu- ally. She lost about half of it.

She followed a treat- ment for two weeks with no improvement. Then she tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment, using the Soap to wash the scalp and rub- bing the Ointment in well. She began to improve at once and her scalp was com- pletely well in two months." (Signed) Miss Evelyn L. Morris, June 9, 1914.

600 UOMINI PRIGIONIERI GLI AUSTRIACI DISFATTI

ROMA, 18giugno.—Il rapporto ufficiale del Comando Italiano porta oggi la conferma della disfatta austriaca, durante la quale un battaglione austriaco, dopo un sanguinoso combattimento, sos tenuto a nord-est di monte Nero, nelle Alpi Carniche, fu completamente annientato. Furono presi piu' di 600 austriaci prigionieri, compresi 30 ufficiali.

Ecco il testo dei bollett ino ufficiale:

"Sulla frontiera di Trento e Tirolo si sono verificati un buon numero di piccoli combattimenti tutti risoluti in nostro favore.

"Un distaccamento austriaco, che si avanzava da Rovereto, fu attaccato e distrutt o vicino Zugna.

"Noi abbiamo occupato Salso, Albergo e Falsarego, nella valle Costeana, ed abbiam fatto 20 prigionieri.

"Sul fronte delle Carniche il duello di artiglierie continua con violenza inaudita.

"Noi distruggemmo i cannoni austriaci e disperdemmo gli operai addetti al rafforzamento delle difese. Una colonna di austriaci in marcia fu spezzata dal nostro fuoco.

"Quantunque un forte vento ci impedisca di precisare le nostre osservazioni pure abbiam potuto assicurarci che le nostre artiglierie han distrutto la fortezza di Malborghetto. Le nostre granate fecero incendiare i passaggi che connettono le difese al basso con quelle superiori. La piattaforma dei cannoni di una batteria coverta e' stata seriamente danneggiata.

"Le ultime notizie dal fronte continuano ad esaltare il brillante attacco fatto la notte del 16 vicino monte Nero. L'attacco fu effettuato sotto grandi difficolta' e le nostre truppe furono soggette ad una tempesta di srapnels. Noi femmo 600 prigionieri, non che conquistammo un gran numero di carabine e due mitragliatrici.

"Nel pomeriggio di mercoledi un battaglione ungherese fece un violento attacco contro le nostre posizioni a Zakrain, nella zona di Monte Nero, ma fu respinto. Il nostro contr' attacco portò alla completa distruzione dei nemici.

"Nel fronte dIJ Isonzo, la nostra offensiva fa del buon lavoro. Nelle vicinanze di Plask, le nostre truppe, dopo un lungo e sanguinoso combattimento, hanno occupato un vasto territorio. Le nostre nuove posizioni sono state consolidate e noi abbiam respinto i contro attacchi dei nemici.

"In altri punti j 'sell' Isonzo continua il duello delle artiglierie.

"La stazione ferroviaria di Gorizia e' stata parzialmente distrutta dai nostri proietti ii e 58 gran numero di vagoni presso fuoco e furono distrutti.

Notizie non ufficiali da Udine asseriscono che gli Italiani "Gli attaccano le difese di Trieste.

Kaiser Back of Peace Move in U.S., Paris Hears

PARIS, June 18.—The Paris Temps prints the following dispatch from Copenhagen: "The new peace campaign in the United States is being carried out along lines indicated by the Kaiser himself and Herr Ballin.

"The latter believes that the easiest way to influence American opinion is to persuade the United states that Germany desires to end the war.

"Dr. Dernberg began to put this policy into effect, but it was nipped in the bud by the King of Bavaria's sudden declaration that it was Germany's intention to annex Belgium.

"A further attempt will be made in America, the result of which Berlin hopes will be to render the Americans favorably disposed toward the suggestions Germany's reminder to President Wilson's last note will contain."

Here's Another German Atrocity In United States

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 18.—Another atrocity has been laid at the door of the Germans. This time it is thunderstorms. L. H. Noe, newspaper correspondent at Sayville, L. I., sends the following:

"Residents of this town and the surrounding country have decided that the frequent electric disturbances here recently have been attracted by the tall steel shafts of the German wireless station. Between their apprehension over the war messages that may be passing back and forth over their heads and the fear of being struck by lightning brought by the receiving tower, the people of Sayville are losing the peace of mind once theirs before the town became famous as a wireless centre.

"Don't bolt protest to The Hague."

Mrs. Brown's Ice Box Saved from German Danger

NEWPORT, June 18.—The German patent ice box, which Mrs. James J. Brown ordered from abroad to be part of the equipment of her $1,000 kitchenette, and which was reported to have been confiscated by a ruthless Imperial War Office for the men in the trenches, has finally arrived.

There has been much speculation over the fate of the ice box. Mrs. Brown, who is a survivor of the Titanic, and globe-trotter, is a personal friend of the Kaiser. The idea of the German military authorities seizing the ice box has struck Mrs. Brown's friends as all the more amusing under the circumstances. But the ice box had arrived at last.

Mrs. Brown has rented the club cottage for the season. The ice box and the $1,000 kitchenette are being installed. Mrs. Brown is also having fitted up a "Nature" dining room. The ceiling is being painted to represent the sky and the setting sun. A fountain adds to the natural effect.

FANS, GET READY TO ENTER THE AMERICAN'S BASE BALL CONTEST

JANVRIN of the Red Sox

25 WILL GO TO THE WORLD'S SERIES

All Expenses Paid By the American

Contest Starts Sunday

Nominate Yourself Today

MAGEE of the Braves

Sunday the big race for the privilege of witnessing all the games in the 1915 World's Series begins. With the publication of the first big 10-vote coupon, the battle will be on in earnest.

We mention this important fact so that you will realize that it is imperative that YOU SEND IN YOUR NOMINATION BLANK IMMEDIATELY, so that you will have a flying start on the first contest series. If you have delayed sending in your name, which may mean that you will be one of the twenty-five lucky fans who will be on the spot when the National and American leagues line up, send it in without another minute's delay.

There is so much interest in the contest for the pleasure of being at the championship baseball battles that it is well to get an early start by securing the pledges of your friends to save their votes for YOU instead of for "the other fellow" who may live around the corner.

Don't let anyone spoil your chances. You must realize the necessity of getting a flying start. Take advantage of your big opportunity NOW so that when next Sunday comes with its big 10-vote coupon, the first of the contest, you and your friends will be all lined up and ready for the fray.

The AMERICAN is going to send 25 fans to every game in the World's Series. It does not matter where the games will be played—the AMERICAN'S twenty-five fans will go to see them in style.

AND IT WILL NOT COST ONE OF THE FORTUNATE ONES A SINGLE PENNY. The American stands the entire expense of the jaunt.

Why don't YOU make up your mind RIGHT NOW that you will be one of this happy party, who will journey to the different cities in Pullman cars and enjoy grandstand seats at all of the games, when the other thousands of fans are compelled to stand in front of the newspaper bulletin boards and get their returns.

You don't have to go around and ask your friends for subscriptions. The only labor, if you care to call it labor, is to save the coupons and have your friends save them from both the Daily and Sunday issues of the AMERICAN.

The contest starts Sunday, June 20, and continues to September 12. That gives you plenty of time to gather in the necessary votes.

All men and youths over 16 years of age are eligible to enter the contest. There is no limit to the territory from which you can get your votes. There is only one way by which you can keep going ahead and that is to obtain the coupons from the AMERICAN.

Send in your nomination today and then start your campaign for vote pledges.

See as many of your friends as you can get on the telephone, or by letter, or personally calling on them between now and Sunday, and ask them to promise to save their AMERICAN World's Series Coupons for YOU during the contest—that you INTEND to be one of the most popular 25 fans in New England chosen to represent your city.

Your friends will be only too glad to help you because it is easy for them to do so. Nearly everyone reads the AMERICAN and those who do not will be glad to take it during the term of the contest and save the votes FOR YOU.

An early start is half the race. Send in that nomination today. If, for any reason, you may not be able to take part in the battle, nominate your chum, your father, brother or friend.

Watch for the first vote coupon in Sunday's AMERICAN and in the meantime—SEND THAT NOMINATION TODAY.

MEYER-GERHARD HOAX 'IMPOSSIBLE'

posed on, if nothing more. Her story becomes more and more ridiculous the more you investigate it."

Mrs. Lewis, however, was not at all daunted by Captain Hecker's letter and her daughter illadys promptly remarked:

"Did Captain Hecker produce the envelope?"

When told he did not, she said: "Well, the envelope certainly would make this alibi stronger. Mother has a lot more proof which will completely clinch her charges before she's through."

When Mrs. Lewis was asked about additional proofs she said: "I have been notified not to give up any more documentary evidence in my possession, in order that it may be reserved for an official investigation which has already begun.

WOMAN DENIES HOAX.

"I have not been the victim of the hoax. The man with whom I made a contract for the sale of the Krag rifles, and who signed the document which has been published, is Dr. Alfred Meyer, a major-general in the German army. He toured this country to buy war supplies for Germany and sailed under the special protection of the United States government, as did Mr. Gerhard.

"I am ready to prove that the real Meyer-Gerhard, formerly colonial secretary, is now in a German field hospital suffering from wounds received on the eastern front less than ten days ago. If I am not mistaken, his name will be found in a recent casualty list.

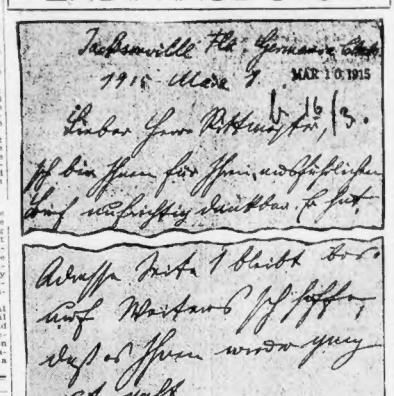
MEYER-GERHARD NOTE, OFFERED TO END FRAUD STORY



Facsimile of the first and last parts of a letter written by Dr. Meyer-Gerhard in Jacksonville, Fla., on March 8, 1915, the same day that Mrs. Selma Lewis claims the man she knew as Dr. Meyer signed an agreement in New York relative to commissions on the proposed sale of rifles. The date—March 10—was stamped on the Meyer-Gerhard letter at the New York office of the German Red Cross the day it was received there. The translation follows:

"Dear Rittmeister (captain):

"I am sincerely grateful to you for your long letter. * * * Address will be the same until further notice. I hope you are well. Very truly yours, MEYER-GERHARD."

CHANDLER SAYS HE IS NOT OSBORNE

"I'm not the mysterious 'Oliver Osborne' in this Rae Tanzer case. I'm the goat," today declared Carl H. Chandler, member of the Boston Press Club and well known to business men and politicians here.

"Holy smoke, who wished this subpoena on me? dispatches from New York, where Chandler is now a special agent for the Treasury Department, quote him as saying.

"I don't know anything about Rae Tanzer, James W. Osborne, the big lawyer she sued for heart balm, Mrs. James W. Osborne, Slade or Slade. Miss Tanzer's counsel, nor the Oliver Osborne," said to be from Boston, who has flitted through the case for the past few months.

"How it will do I look like the Beau Brummel they say this Oliver Osborne was? I don't remember ever even seeing one of the people in this tangle.

TWO DEVELOPMENTS.

There were two important developments in New York in the Oliver Osborne-Rae Tanzer mystery. One was the retainer of Martin W. Littleton as counsel for David and Maxwell Slade, attorneys under indictment for obstructing justice by interfering with witnesses in James W. Osborne's defence in Miss Tanzer's breach of promise suit. The other was the subpoenaing of Carl H. Chandler on the grounds that he was the mysterious "Oliver Osborne."

At the time the first case came up it was said that the man wanted in the case was a Boston customs man. Today Mr. Chandler is going over his records to see whether or not he was in New York on the date specified.

"Hang it all, do I look like a 'Beau Brummel'" and he invited inspection of the gray suit he was wearing and the other articles of personal adornment, such as fur gloves, which were black without gray tops. His clothes were modest enough throughout and not new, and he was smoking a pipe instead of a cigarette. He might easily have passed for a congenial traveling salesman.

"I didn't know anything about this case," Mr. Chandler said, "except for what I had read in the newspapers. I didn't know James W. Osborne, Mrs. James W. Osborne, Rae Tanzer, any of the Slades or anybody else in any way connected with it and as far as I know I never saw any of them.

GETS SUBPOENA.

"A man handed me this infernal subpoena when I was leaving the custom house for lunch, and when I looked at it I found Oliver that I had been ordered to appear as a witness for the Slades, declared Mr. Chandler. I rushed back to the office and got Pete Sullivan, the head of one of the departments, who knew everybody at the district attorney's office, and had him take me up there to see what it was all about.

"District Attorney Marshall told me not to worry about it when I explained the situation to him, but just as we were leaving the office Pete saw Benjamin Slade in the building and told me who he was.

"I made for Slade and he refused to say anything about the reason for subpoenacing me at first, then he told me he would talk to the office if I went there and I met them all there fifteen minutes later. I was mighty anxious to find out how I'd got into this fix.

"At the office they just asked me some questions about where I had lived in Boston and where I was during certain months. I had been through the street they asked about in Boston, where they had the address for this Oliver Osborne man, only a few times. It was a furnished room section of the city."

NOT IN NEW YORK.

Mr. Chandler said, concerning the two dates about which he was asked, that he was not in New York on October 18, the date on which the mysterious Oliver is supposed to have been at Plainfield, N. J., and that, although he was in New York on March 18, when Oliver was reported to have called on Mr. and Mrs. James W. Osborne at the Sherman Square Hotel to clear Mr. Osborne of the charge, he did not see either of the Osbornes. He said that he had looked up the custom house records to see if they showed where he was that day, but except for the reports of cases he had been working on and letters he had written there was nothing to be found there.

Even Mr. Chandler's chief at the custom house, H. D. Esterbrook, head of the special agents, was among those who, after hearing the report that he had been charged with being Oliver, surveyed him calmly, coldly and finally said: "By George, you do look like Oliver." Mr. Chandler thought there ought to be a law against being made "the goat," he said.

"THE GODDESS"

By GOUVERNEUR MORRIS and CHARLES W. GODDARD

By Gouverneur Morris and Charles W. Goddard

Copyright, 1919, by the Star Company.

"I am to let him off you must give me a better line of reasoning than mayhem and perhapses. What if my whole happiness was bound up in him, its to me? If I told you that we were already married ..."

"Good Lord!" exclaimed Mary.

"Don't worry," said Celestia, "we are not. But I am certainly not going to give him up on the grounds that I am not his social equal."

"You mixed will always be under suspicion. Don't you know that you are a penniless girl, and that he will be worth millions?"

"He never told me that," said Celestia, "but so much the better. Honesty is the most useful thing in the world and next comes money."

"But to marry for money!" Miss Blackstone expressed contempt in every one of her firmly cut words. Celestia said nothing and looked amusedly insentiable.

"If he does marry you," said Miss Blackstone, suddenly losing control of her temper at the look on Celestia's face, "people will say it was because he had to. You can't jump to the North Woods without a chaperon and escape malicious talk."

"It would seem so," said Celestia, slowly. And she started to turn very pink and ended by turning white. And there began to burn suddenly in her breast a feeling of which until that moment she had known nothing. Sweet she was, gracious and good. She thought she had been sent by Heaven to help everybody in the world. Nevertheless those sharp, burning pangs which she was enduring were jealousy.

"You love him yourself," she said, quickly, and so I think I will marry him after all."

"One can't argue except with an equal," said Miss Blackstone, and turned upon her heel.

As she left the house Tommy Barclay was on the point of entering it. She was so angry that she cut him dead.

He smiled, but not altogether with amusement, for nobody really likes to be cut by anybody, and went in to Celestia.

He expected to find her as usual, friendly, open, well poised and aloof. She was none of those things. Tears were just going to overflow her eyes and run down her face, and so far being aloof, she no sooner saw Tommy than she ran to him, as a child runs to its nurse, and flung her arms about his neck, and told him that she loved him and would marry him right away.

Poor Tommy! He held her close and caressed her, and there was a big lump in his throat, and never a word that he could say until at last the meaning of his silence was clear to Celestia, and she tore herself loose from him.

"Now I'm you," she cried, "who won't marry me."

"Oh, Celestia!" cried Tommy, "how can I? I haven't a penny in the world."

A dozen of the most important men in the United States were gathered in Barclay's office upon his urgent invitation. Celestia was already making such a stir in the city among the poor that Barclay and Stilliter had concluded that the time was ripe to try her effect on the rich and elident.

Only men whom they could trust were present. The last to arrive was Kehr, the coal baron. His word was as good as his bond, and, except that he spent oceans of money on Chinese antiques, he was said to be the stingiest man in Pennsylvania.

Professor Stilliter had been telling of some recent experiments in hypnotism of which he had been receiving the account from an Arabian correspondent. As Kehr entered he caught the word "hypnotism" and snorted:

"All rubbish!" he exclaimed. "Might's well believe in ghosts or Democrats. I'd like to see any one hypnotize me."

After this he chose Bandy with Barclay and the others, last of all with Stilliter.

"You don't believe in hypnotism," said Stilliter, "because you don't know anything about it. I've got something here, though, that you do know about, none better."

So saying he took from its case that famous crystal of which mention has been made.

Kehr's eyes sparkled, but he only grunted, as he took the crystal into his hand.

"Take it to the light," said Stilliter, and he followed Kehr to the nearest window. Barclay nudged the man nearest him and winked one eye.

"I am not rich," said Stilliter quietly, "but I will give you a thousand dollars if you can find a flaw or an imperfection of any sort in that crystal."

Professor Stilliter hypnotizes the coal magnate into giving away money

Kehr brought the crystal so near his eyes that they had to cross to see it, and he began to turn it slowly this way and that.

Stilliter kept up a running fire of comment in the same quiet, even tone. Last, he said, "Why, you must have had a bad night. You can hardly keep your eyes open; better just let 'em shut and have a little nap."

He reached around Kehr from behind and quickly took the crystal away from them. Then he turned to his audience.

"Did I hear someone say, 'put up job'? I hope not. It wouldn't have been worth while. Why, he was easier to hypnotize than a chicken. Tell the gentlemen how easily you were hypnotized, Turn and face them first, make a little bow. That's a fine fellow. Now then!"

Kehr spoke in a dull, monotonous voice.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "I was easier to hypnotize than a chicken."

"Spoken like a man!" exclaimed Stilliter. Tears or laughter were running down Barclay's face. He wiped them away.

"Some of us do think this is a put up job, Stilliter," he said. "Make him do something more important."

"Well," said Stilliter, "we all know Mr. Kehr for a man who in money matters is conspicuously backward about coming forward. I might make him dance for you, sing for you, eat soap or stand on his head until you would think that it might be a put up job. It wouldn't cost him a cent."

He turned to Kehr and in a voice of command said: "Sit down at that desk in the first position of writing."

Kehr obeyed.

Zoe—The Story of a Great Love

(Copyright, American Newspaper Syndicate, Inc., in the United States and Great Britain.)

By CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN

He switched off the remaining light as he spoke, but it did not leave the room in darkness. The firelight flickered fitfully on the walls and ceiling, and outside was a lurid glow.

"Poor woman," said Brooke sentimentally—"poor woman. I suppose she knew somehow what a useless word it is, and politely accepted the stands and forgives unsaid."

"Don't!" groaned Crawley. "Don't, man, for heaven's sake, talk like that. I stand to lose everything."

Brooke frowned.

"Yes, you're right," he snapped across the room from Pegan. "Come along. Let's get out. We're bound to be disturbed here and then, whatever excitement are not back inside newspapers would have us believe, we have to keep ourself well in hand to ensure we are not suspected to be as interested or alarmed as I must be. Don't forget to put on your coat, you know. That will be fatal. You understand."

* * *

What afterward happened was plainly described in the judgment of the high court of justice. The report which was given prominence somewhat later on the second page perhaps more to the paucity of general news than to its local importance reads as follows:

(Extract from the Guildford Tribune.)

"A disastrous fire, causing much damage and doubtful incendiary circumstances, occurred on the property of Sir Godfrey Brooke, the new K. C. M. G., of Guildford. The outbreak, to the early hours of this morning, is one of the only outbreak is at present a matter of pure speculation, and, though there are suggestions in certain quarters pointing to deliberate arson so far, we understand, the police are on the instructions of Sir Godfrey and taking the matter up.

"The alarm was not received on the fire brigade of Guildford, and long after the conflagration had obtained total hold of the old barn of the Lowels, which was half full of hay, and on the arrival of the fire engine are flames were quite beyond control.

"The brigade made a gallant effort to save the farm buildings close at hand, which were in imminent danger, and to a large extent succeeded, though not unconsiderably damaged. The stackyards bordering Clandon lane are totally destroyed. A high wind was blowing at the time, and this was in a large measure the cause of the extensive damage. So long and fierce was the conflagration that the sight, from a spectacular point of view, was grand to the onlooker and attracted quite a crowd of people, who were at first under the impression that the Lascelle tariff was on fire.

"That was all, with the exception of a later paragraph, which informed the readers of the Guildford Tribune that a special representative of that important local organ had been granted an interview with Sir Godfrey, in which he stated that the loss was not so great as had been stated and that, although the estate were not insured, he was only glad that no loss of life had occurred.

Sir Godfrey, it was stated, had presented a check for $500 as an appreciation of the fire brigade's prompt though futile attempt to save his property.

Nobody Crawley nor Brooke read this brief summary until the following day, for the Tribune is an evening paper, but interviews with several people had satisfied them that everything was well. Both had been up all night and looked haggard and worn as they drove back to the town the next morning.

From the postoffice at Guildford Brooke dispatched a telegram to his wife in which he said as follows:

"Will you about one. Had feast of a time. Fire in barn. Bed at last night. Longing to see you again. All well here. Brooke."—Some strange private code words must have meant to anyone but Brooke and his wife!—Godfrey."

He showed the purely personal telegram to Crawley.

"That's all I need say, I suppose?" he asked.

"That's all," answered Crawley. And his voice sounded faint and unnatural.

A mist swam before his eyes. The nervous strain of the night had told upon him. He was on the verge of a really serious breakdown, and all the time he knew that a far greater strain was ahead of him. In less than two hours' time Brooke would know that his wife had disappeared.

On the journey on to London Crawley sat beside Brooke, who drove as carefully as ever and made excellent but not reckless pace.

"I'll drop you at Brooseyon road," said Brooke, when they entered the region of traffic. "I shall go straight on to the Savoy and see Di. She will be getting anxious. You quite understand, don't you, old man?"

"Quite," murmured Crawley, though he would have given untold gold to have had the strength to insist on going on to the hotel and seeing the whole thing through.

It was the unlikely remote possibility that still clung to him and lured him on—the chance that despite everything that had been and inevitably must be, he would be able, by some almost superhuman effort and by the interposition of the phenomenal luck which had hitherto never deserted him, to keep the identity of Zoe a secret and prevent Brooke from ever associating the name and memory of his wife with her.

At all costs Brooke must never know. That had been his apology, his motive, his battle cry—Brooke must never know! And so far Brooke did not know—so far!

"I think," said Brooke, as he carefully drove the car through the busy traffic of a South London highway, "I shall have to sell that Cuyp picture of yours, Crawley."

The latter shuddered as he articulated a reply.

"Why?" he edded.

"I don't quite know," answered Brooke, "but somehow I feel it couldn't see that face—the face of the dead woman looking at me day after day. Understand?"

"Yes; I think I understand," muttered Crawley.

"I think I'll sell it back to Levenstein. He seemed to regret selling it to me."

Flirting and the Price

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The point of the old quotation is that in Spring the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love! And, sadly enough, few girls place the emphasis where it belongs. Spring is the season for flowering all through Nature, and young hearts seem then to blossom in the fulness of life's sunshine. But it is bitterly sad that weeds are often attractive to the untrained eye that does not distinguish them from worthier blossoms.

In the urge of young desire for love and the warmth of loving, too many boys and girls rush madly into the Spring garden of life and pick weeds. One of the most noxious weeds I know is that of flirtation. Think of the utter danger of rushing into a love affair or a friendship with some one of whom you know nothing more than that the color of their eyes or the cut of their coats pleases you!

How dare you risk letting some one into the circle of your precious youth if you know nothing of his moral and physical and spiritual fitness to companion you? Squander your fortune and you save or earn another. Taint your youth and your whole life must bear the stigma of the evil.

Don't let your hunger for love and companship lure you into taking it from any good looking stranger you pass. Don't flirt. Don't strike up acquaintances. Don't take chances with your reputation and happiness and character itself. Youth cannot weigh and gauge the characters of all it admires. The most evil people are those who are clever enough to appear charming. When you let yourself be lightly loved, when you allow yourself to be approached by any one who chooses to steal acquaintanceship with you, you risk their disrespect and so prompt the effort to diminish you in self.

An introduction is a guarantee. The person who makes it stands sponsor for the new acquaintance brought into your life.

Society has made rules for its own protection. Break them and you pay. One of the rules is—"Don't flirt." Obey it, for it is founded on wisdom.

Lime Combats Tuberculosis

"It is difficult to escape the conviction that lime starvation and lime assimilation are the real issues behind the masks of vulnerability and resistance to tuberculosis," writes Ira Van Gieson, M. D., in the May 11, 1912, issue of the New York "Medical Record."

Dr. Van Gieson is eminent in his profession and his assertion that lime assimilation is the "real issue" in resistance to tuberculosis bears the stamp of authority.

Ordinarily lime is not easily assimilated medicinally, but Eckman's Alterative is one preparation containing it in such form and combination as to insure assimilation by the average person.

"This is one reason for its success in many cases of tuberculosis which apparently have yielded to it and others which have been benefited through its use.

Our experience-based faith in this remedy is shared by a large number of men and women, who say they owe health, strength and life to it.

Contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, hence a trial is safe. For sale by all Riker Drug Stores and leading druggists.

Don't Hide Them With a Veil! Remove Them With The Othine Prescription

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by any of the Riker-Jaynes Drug Stores, or any druggist, under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine, it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

A Harmless Way to Remove Coarse Hair

This method is totally different from pastes and rub-on preparations which merely remove hair from the surface of the skin. It robs hair of its vitality by attacking it under the skin as well as on the skin. Theatre Magazine says: De Miracle, the original liquid hair remover, is far superior to electricity, X-ray or any other method. Beware of so-called hair removers which are supposedly recommended through bogus quotations from so-called magazines which do not exist.—Advertisement.

Beer Is a Nutritious Food Not Merely a Beverage

THE Hospital, London, May 1st, says editorially referring to the report of the special government commission in England, "When a man drinks good beer he drinks and eats at the same time just as when he eats a bowl of soup. Our commissioners remind us that if the worth of a food is measured by its calorimetric value the fact is that a quart of good beer is nearly equivalent to a quarter of a pound of beef."

Always having realized the great food value of beer as a beverage—our aim has been to make Harvard Green Label the beer for you to order.

We use Imported Bohemian Hops exclusively in its brewing—the malt is of the finest grade and we insist that it is aged four months before leaving the brewery.

NEWS WRITTEN BY LEADING EXPERTS

CROSS TO BATTLE DUNDEE TONIGHT

By JACK CONWAY.

ANOTHER open air boxing show will be conducted at Ebbetts Field, Brooklyn, tonight. An attractive card has been arranged by the promoters. Leach Cross and Johnny Dundee will clash in the feature bout of ten rounds, while Freddy Welsh will exchange blows with Young Lustig in another ten-round skirmish.

Open air boxing shows have made a hit with the "fans" in the Empire State. They go particularly big on holidays, but it is believed that this evening's show will prove a great success. Two open air tournaments were held on May 30. One was staged at Ebbetts Field in the afternoon, while the other was held at Brighton Beach in the evening. Close to 10,000 persons attended each series of bouts.

It was open air boxing which made California the centre of the boxing world a few years ago. It is usually possible to accommodate large crowds at the open air clubs. Consequently the gate receipts are big and the promoters are able to stage matches between the world's leading boxers.

Dundee and Cross should put up an interesting bout tonight. If Dundee is right, he should win the popular decision. It is not believed that Welsh will experience much trouble in winning his tussle with Lustig.

MIKE GLOVER is training steadily at Highland Lake for his twelve-round bout with Jack Britton, which will be held at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday night. There is but little chance of either Glover or Britton doing an Ad Wolgast at the eleventh hour, as they have both posted substantial forfeits for weight and appearance with the management of the Atlas Club. Then, neither of these men have ever cultivated the habit of getting cold feet on the day of an important ring contest.

GLOVER expects to win from Britton. The South Boston welterweight realizes that Morgan's champion is a boxing wizard as he has proved by knocking out Charley White in eighteen rounds at New Orleans a couple of years ago, but he believes that he will prove a little bit too fast and clever for him. Glover has already beaten Britton once, while the latter has a victory to his credit over the Peninsula idol. Therefore there should be a merry battle for honors in the third encounter between these two men.

BRITTON has taken part in three bouts in Boston and he won each of them. He knocked out Eddie Murphy and Joe Eagan while he was on a foul to his whirl with Young Saylor. Jack informs us that he will make it four wins in a row here in the Hub by trouncing Glover next Tuesday night.

CHARLEY WHITE, Chicago's sensational lightweight, is not experiencing much trouble in knocking out his opponents. "Young" Brown, whom White knocked out in Gotham the other night, is a good boxer, but he was not any match for Nate Lewis' protege. It will take a Jimmy Duffy or a Freddy Welsh to give White a close battle.

SOUND BODIES

By JULIAN HAWTHORNE

This is the ninth of a series of articles on "Sound Bodies" written exclusively for the BOSTON AMERICAN by Julian Hawthorne. These articles will be continued in the AMERICAN on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

There is a group of muscles which moves your head on your neck—back and forward, up and down, and sideways. Another group enables your arms to push, pull, lift, strike and rotate in all directions. A third group does like service for your legs. A fourth attends to twisting your body at the waist, bending it back and forward, sideways, diagonally, and to lifting it upward to its full extent, either vertically or athart.

All these large groups can be subdivided: Such as the deltoids, at the junction of the arms with the body; the hitting and rowing muscles, behind the shoulders and at the upper sides of the body; the pectorals, on the chest; the abdominals, in front of the stomach and digestive tract; the muscles at the small of the back; the buttocks (which most people use merely to sit on, but which can serve better uses); the calf muscles, and those alongside the shin-bones.

There are also small groups of muscles for movements of the hands, fingers and wrists, of the knees, and of the feet and ankles. There are muscles in your face, even, which may advantageously be exercised, and muscles to move the body, and the scalp—but these are now atrophied in most people.

It happens, of course, that in making a movement for the development of any one muscle, several adjoining muscles are likewise brought into action. You may regard that as unneeded increment—a sort of muscular gratuity. The interplay and mutual co-operation of the muscles is a wonderful and beautiful thing to observe, and helps you to realize the superhuman skill and foresight which went to the making of human bodies.

All these groups of muscles may be exercised without employing any gymnastic apparatus. On the other hand, gymnasiums contain, nowadays, apparatus specially designed for the exercising of each and every group of muscles; many of them are very ingenious.

Gymnasiums can make you muscularly strong—there is no doubt of that. They are by no means so sure to make you healthy; and there is always a certain amount of risk in exercising machines. They lure you into doing too much; and they substitute weight for will, thereby not only losing the great advantage which exercises of the will gives in muscular training, but endangering the integrity of the vital organs—of the heart especially. For instance, by practice you may enable yourself to "put up" a hundred-pound dumbbell. But a false adjustment, as you perform the feat, may strain your heart, or it may cause rupture. And that will be the end of your gymnastic ambition.

But you may, without anything at all in your hand, perform exactly the movement of putting up the dumb-bell, and throw into the act all the strength at your command, by mere application of the will; you cannot strain yourself, and your will as well as your muscles will benefit by the exercise.

My counsel is to defer gymnasium exercises for a year or two at least. After that, you will be competent to judge whether, or how far, they can be of use to you.

Now, for a little more about "free" exercises.

Harvard-Yale Game at 3:30, Not 2 P. M.

The Harvard Athletic Association sends out the following:

"Because of careless and mistaken announcement in both the Harvard Crimson and the Alumni Bulletin, there is considerable misunderstanding as to the time of the Harvard-Yale game at Soldiers Field on Wednesday, June 25. The time of beginning the game is 3:30 p. m., and not 2 p. m., as announced in the above publications and also in some of the Boston papers, who probably got their information from the Harvard papers."

HARVARD TIME FOR TEST KEPT SECRET

HARVARD TRAINING QUARTERS, Red Top, Vt., June 15.—Little work was done at the Harvard quarters yesterday, although conditions were perfect, the principal features being a time trial for the freshman eight and a fast mile for the varsity.

Racing starts by all the crews is being practiced daily, and with "exams" all finished tomorrow real hard work is expected until the call of time next Friday.

The Harvard baseball team en route to New York, where it plays Princeton today, accompanied by Coach Percy Haughton and Managers Cunningham and Farnum, paid a visit to the Harvard crew, coming up from New London on Mr. Herbert's auto Gypsy. After dining and looking over the quarters they were taken out on the John Harvard and witnessed the rowing, and then were taken to New London, from where they proceeded to New York.

SATISFACTORY TRIAL.

The varsity eight paddled down to the 1-mile mark in one stretch, and after several racing starts rowed over one mile at fast clip, keeping the stroke at thirty-six for the mile. The time was not given, but was very satisfactory, the men swinging together at the high stroke, and were much improved.

The freshman eight, on account of their time trial in the morning, simply paddled two miles across from the quarters. The second varsity practiced facing starts and short rows at a high stroke. White was again at No. 6 in this boat, but Mr. Young, the crew physician, says Mr. Sanderf will take his seat today, his boil being practically healed.

The two fours and practically motionless, being out less than an hour.

TO ROW UP STREAM TODAY.

In the morning the freshman eight was sent over the course up stream from the mile and a half mark just below the navy yard to the three and a half mile mark. No time was given out, but with a fresh tide and wind, the time was remarkably fast, and entirely satisfactory.

This crew rows down stream race today, as the time trial was in the nature of a hard workout.

The two varsity eights practiced racing starts and short paddles at also did the freshman four.

In all probability the varsity boats will go over the course up stream today as they have not been over the course up stream yet with perfect conditions.

W. Lund and George F. Monforts were visitors at the quarters.

Leslie Mann Suspended.

CHICAGO, June 15.—Outfielder Leslie Mann and Charles Hanford of the Chicago clubs have been suspended for three days each by President Ebbets on charges of umpire baiting at Kansas City.

Willard's Nose a Target.

Judging by what happened to him in his first real fight, Jess Willard thought the rules forbade getting hit anywhere except on the nose. He thinks he was hit there about two thousand times in the first round.

But that didn't last, and although he lost the first fight on a "raw deal" foul, he was rematched at once and later whipped his man handsomely.

The eleventh chapter of the champion's autobiography will appear in the AMERICAN tomorrow. It is one of the most interesting as well as most humorous episodes of his career.

Incidentally, Willard takes great exception to being considered simply a giant. Says he admires cleverness much more than great strength—and tells how Johnson found he had both.

CHERRY MALOTTE WINS BIG EVENT

Until weather conditions failed to keep society from attending the opening day's racing at Cherry Hill yesterday morning, it greatly resembled a social function, as hundreds of society people were present.

The Misses Cherry were the hostesses of the occasion, and Miss Constance Cherry was the winner of the Maiden Handicap, in which the Misses Cherry were the only entries. Miss Cherry's mount, Favorite from the stable of the Misses Cherry, had little trouble in defeating Miss Cherry's mount, Favorite from the same stable, by a length and a half. Miss Cherry's mount was the favorite in the betting, being backed down to 1 to 2, while Miss Cherry's mount was backed at 2 to 1. Miss Cherry's mount was the favorite from the start, and was never headed. Miss Cherry's mount was the favorite from the start, and was never headed. TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks had no definite price trend at the start, and many leading issues were unchanged. In New York U. S. Steel and Union Pacific advanced fractions, while Baltimore & Ohio, Reading and Amalgamated was off fractionally, while a number of other issues were unchanged. There was no activity either in bonds or trading. Within a few minutes the list was on a regular holiday basis in New York. The trading was of full volume then and very quiet in Boston. There has been little alteration, in the tone of the market since last night. Market operators are again in a waiting mood. The foreign situation is a deterrent to trading. Little fear exists that there will be any change in the dispatch with Germany.

While exchange rates were firmer yesterday, there was no material touch in loans more than ever. Sir George Paish says this country is likely to have its favor at the end of the next fiscal year at a trade balance of $1,000,000,000 and he estimates that the United States will have $300,000,000 additional money movement to handle. It is a question if Europe still has enough American securities to pay what is due this country before declaring them. How Europe is going to pay this country itself and finance for war and other supplies is becoming a question of great importance.

STOCKS WERE WEAKER.

Among early declines in New York were Amalgamated 1, Chino ⅝, Anaconda ¼, American Smelting 1, American Can ⅝, Baltimore & Ohio 1, Bethlehem Steel 1, Studebaker ½, United States Rubber ¼, Westinghouse ⅛, General Electric ¼, New York Central ¼, New Haven ⅜, Northern Pacific ⅛, Reading ⅝, and Goodrich ⅜, while Peoples Gas & Ohio and Union Pacific ¼, United States Steel was up ⅛, American Telephone ⅜, and Goodrich ⅜.

In Boston coppers and cities were lower, recessions including Amalgamated 1, Butte & Superior ⅝, American Zinc ⅝, Mohawk ⅛, Calumet & Arizona ¼, Copper Range ¼, Granby ⅛, North Butte ½, Quincy ½, United States Smelting ¼ and Shoe Machinery ½. Massachusetts Gas was up ⅛.

STEEL TRADE EXPANDS.

Steel production is expanding and it is expected that plants will soon be operating on an average basis of 70 per cent. of capacity. The Steel Corporation's present percentage is estimated at 65. Export business is still good. There is also more domestic demand. The Steel Corporation is going to spend firm $2,000,000 to $2,000,000 near Pittsburgh to build a sheet and hoop making plant.

Baldwin Locomotive sold close to its high record price within half an hour after the news that the order from the locomotives from Russia alone, total 17,000 cars.

The passing of the Chesapeake & Ohio dividend had been discounted in dealings to that extent.

It is believed that the price of spelter, when buying is resumed on large scale, will not be above 15 cents a pound. In London today spot copper and futures were off 1 to 2 each, and electrolytic lead was up 10s and spelter was unchanged.

CURLEY DEMANDS FIN. COM. RECORDS

John F. Murphy, chairman of the Finance Commission, called today to call a special meeting of the commission to consider the request of Mayor Curley that he be furnished with a complete transcript of the record of evidence collected by the commission in investigating the Marks Angell charges in connection with the Franklin Park refreshment concession.

Because Mr. Murphy believes that the Mayor has no right to this evidence, he declared that he would call a special meeting of the commission today and would submit the decision of the majority of the members in regard to the request.

Mayor Curley insists that it is his right to receive the evidence before he make a formal demand on the commission. He says that his answers were made by Rubin, Angell and Dillon to the Commission's questions were not given under the apparent predicts in their stories as transcribed in the latest "Fin. Com." report.

The Mayor's first request, made informally through Chief Clerk Brennahan, was refused by Chairman Murphy with the explanation that the whole board will also probably refuse it.

Court to Hear of Fight Over Beauty

PATTERSON, N. J., June 18.—The story of a midnight fight on a dark, lonely roadway near Hazelwood Heights between two automobilists over the protection of an unknown beauty, will be unfolded when James O'Brien's $15,000 damage suit against Horace Gillis, a prominent Paterson broker, begins. O'Brien says that he was attracted by the girl's cries. When the broker attempted to drive away from Taylor, O'Brien claims the broker attempted him and that he sustained permanent injuries.

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

As a "Bryan Follower" Daniels Should Retire

FREQUENTERS of the White House report the President as bearing up very well under the shock of the Bryan resignation. Not that he manifests signs of exultation or celebrates in public the satisfaction which the incident must have brought to him, but merely that there is evident an air of renewed cheerfulness as though an incubus had been removed.

It must have suggested itself to the President that this relief might be made more complete could he in some manner RID HIS ADMINISTRATION OF THE BURDEN OF HIS SECRETARY OF THE NAVY. We cannot, unfortunately, suggest to him any hope that Mr. Daniels will resign. Josephus is not of that quality. He has been an officeholder before, having served his country in the inconspicuous but honorable position of a clerk in the Treasury Department. He is an officeholder of the type of whom Jefferson despairingly remarked, "Few die and none resign."

Notwithstanding the improbability of a voluntary retirement on the part of Secretary Daniels, the President must be aware of the extreme desirability of his effacement.

When Mr. Wilson was in New York recently and addressed a large audience that cheered every other part of his speech, he bravely but mistakenly said that he approved of Secretary Daniels and the whole Daniels policy. This was the laudatory phrase in which the President, swayed, we fear, by purely partisan feelings, defended the man whom he has put at the head of the Navy Department:

"But before I speak of the navy of the United States I want to take advantage of the first public opportunity I have had to speak of the Secretary of the Navy, to express my confidence and admiration, and to say that he has my unqualified support, for I have counseled with him in intimate fashion. I know how sincerely he has it at heart that everything that the navy does and handles should be done and handled as the people of the United States wish it handled—because efficiency is something more than organization."

Cold, hostile silence followed this utterance. The audience, which had been from the first thoroughly with the President, that had cheered him even when he enunciated doctrines upon which the American people are unquestionably divided, could not follow him in his eulogy of the man of whom ex-Secretary of the Navy Meyer has said:

"I feel he must be held responsible for the demoralized condition of the personnel and the decreased efficiency of the navy at the present time."

Like other Presidents, Mr. Wilson is carefully guarded against thorough knowledge of public opinion. He probably does not know fully how great is the public sentiment against his Secretary of the Navy, how thorough and widespread the conviction that that official is negligent of the development of the navy, disorganizing in his personal relations with its personnel, and not frank nor even always truthful in his assertions to the public concerning the present condition and efficiency of our "first line of defence."

In another meeting held in New York this week, and attended by a thousand or more representative citizens, every complimentary reference to Secretary Garrison was received with earnest applause, while every derogatory or condemnatory remark concerning Secretary Daniels was cheered to the echo. Of this incident the President is probably not informed. But the contrast between this public appreciation of one of his appointees and condemnation of the other is important as indicating that the so-called "fight on Daniels" is not a partisan fight, nor criticism based on any hostility to the administration as a whole, but merely the result of the conviction of the American people that Daniels is unfit for the place he occupies.

AN UNFIT MAN AT THE HEAD OF THE NAVY DEPARTMENT TODAY IS A POSITIVE MENACE TO THE SAFETY OF THE NATION. It would be most fortunate, not only for President Wilson, but for the United States, if Josephus Daniels should follow William J. Bryan, his guide, mentor and idol, into retirement.

Once-Overs

The man who is satisfied with what knowledge he has and thinks that there are few people from whom he can learn anything worth while is going down hill backward.

The man who advances is the one who is always alert to learn something new. It is a wonderful thing to have a thirst for knowledge. Then a man never lets a new idea escape until he has tried it or, anyway, stored it away for future test.

The human storehouse, the mind, is never crowded. The more facts the more capacity.

Said a man the other evening, "The best way to cure nervousness in public speaking is to look at people as a mass, not as individuals."

A noted singer does just the reverse. She says that she selects a sympathetic face from her audience, some one who seems to be in love with music, and then sings to that person. Another good idea.

Such advice may not be new to you, but if your mind is open little pointers like these will sometimes help you out in many ways.

Don't be smugly self-satisfied. Never despise a hint. The Twentieth Century Limited is the result of a hint from a tea-kettle. James Watt took the hint and the perfection of the steam engine followed.

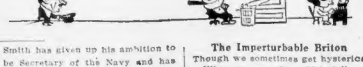
More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

The Graduates!

SMILE at their calm and unruffled conceit,
Pity the haughty vainglorious gall of them;
Strangers to wicked Experience Street;
What a rude jolt there is coming to all of them.
"Merely more burdens for hardworking dads"
You think as you watch from your seat in the gallery,
But don't be so certain that one of those lads
Before very long won't be drawing your salary.

WHAT do they know of the struggle for life?
What a poor trifle their book-garnered knowledge is!
How can they mix in the man-wrecking strife
With only the wisdom that's gathered in colleges?
Gravely their poor little laurels they bear,
Never suspecting you dare to make fun of them.
But never forget that you'd better take care
Or before many years you'll be working for one of them!



No Interference with the Schedule

The Germans sometimes postpone a battle, but they always fight a double-header to make up for it.

Merely a Modest Suggestion

Mr. Daniels says the aeroplane will soon be the most formidable engine of destruction. We dislike to butt in at a critical time, but wouldn't it help a little if he would advocate the building of a few of them for the navy?

Hopeless

Despairing of ever knowing so little about ships as the present incumbent, Senator William Alden Smith has given up his ambition to be Secretary of the Navy and has decided to run for President. And it may be stated without fear of successful contradiction that the Senator knows extremely little about ships, and can prove it by the records of his conduct of the Titanic investigation.

The Imperturbable Briton

Though we sometimes get hysterics
When our cup of trouble's full,
We never get 'em half so bad
As old John Bull!

Let Them Beware

Once more we are about to wage peace on the Mexicans.

SOLD

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

OUT of the window I look from my stall
For the last time, and I see them all.
Master and mistress, and children dear,
That have loved and petted me many a year;
And for many a year it has been my pride
To give them pleasure in drive and ride.

Never a blow from my master's whip;
Nothing but kindness from hand or lip;
A well-kept stable and stalls of state—
And whatever means comfort for me and my mate.
Shining harness, and trappings of gold—
And blankets and bedding to keep out cold;
Oh! a beautiful life we have had, I say;
But now it is over; they sold us today.

A monstrous creature whose voice and breath
Bespeak it a herald of horror and death,
Has taken our place. In the curve of the drive
Stolid and shapeless and unalive
I see it standing. In stable and stall
They are widening doorways and moving a wall
To give it shelter. Tomorrow we go
To a home and master we do not know.

We know not whither; we know not whether
We go divided or go together.
But we know we are leaving the things grown dear;
And we know a stranger will take us from here;
And stranger voices and stranger faces
Will make a desert of other places.

Out in the driveway my master stands,
Petting his monster with eyes and hands.
While mistress and children the praises sing
Of a stolid and shapeless and senseless thing.
It makes no answer with whinny or neigh,
Yet we are to go and the Thing will stay.

Out of the window I look from my stall,
For the last, last time, and I see them all.

How Girls Can Make the Most of Small Wages

By G. VERE TYLER

INSTEAD of using every possible measure to convince working girls that they cannot live on the small salaries they receive, wouldn't it be better for those reasoning upon the subject to attempt helpful suggestions until conditions are bettered?

Every girl who works is silently declaring her desire for independence. Instead of looking for a husband, as in the old days, she looks for a "job."

The subject at hand, though, is: Can she live respectably on the wages she had agreed to accept? I maintain that she can—that a girl can exist on the low wages paid her, in moderate comfort and respectability, provided she does not attempt to stand alone.

Should a number of girls combine and put their wages together, into a common fund, to meet their expenses jointly, it could be done. For instance, if from six to eight, or, say, twenty, girls should form a club among themselves, take a reasonable flat and live together and eat together, alternately performing the duties that the situation entails, it could be accomplished.

Is it not a fact that a man is able to support a large family on, very often, a very limited sum? Could that family exist if each member attempted to live alone? It could not! It's the same with working girls.

The only possible remedy for working girls to live comfortably on a small salary is to club together.

In this manner a certain amount of money could be deducted for personal raiment.

If these girls take an interest in what each one can buy, in the matter of clothing, with the money taken out for the purpose, the competition to look well would become stimulating, without the attendant envy that the individual incurs.

Also, in this manner it would be easy for the girls to detect the one living, as to clothing and otherwise, beyond her means, and they could ostracize her from their club on the ground of immorality, whereas in standing alone the lie, while suspected, could not be proven.

In such a case the girl who goes astray has done so through preference and not necessity, and undoubtedly might have done the same in idleness and the shelter of the home.

A thousand other benefits could be derived if girls would club together and would thus associate. There would be cheerful companionship. In case of sickness they could nurse and care for one another. They could read books together, create mutual pleasures and benefit. Through helpful companionship and healthy living, both of mind and body, they would grow in strength and character.

There wouldn't be the necessity of the occasional rendezvous with "the fellow," who nine times out of ten supplies "the square meal" in anticipation of value received. Let the girls club together to banish such "fellows."

The only way is the sisterhood. When "two or three are gathered together," we are told, the way will be made clear.

Sight

By Jane McLean

TO walk while others tread the busy mart,
In the still watches of the night apart;
Alone, unguided on the crooked way
Of that rough path where others fear to stray.

To know Pain for herself, nor shrink to share
Her bitter cup, her ever homely fare,
To meet unscathed, the sombre eyes of Grief,
Tending the slender flame of sweet belief.

To keep a lonely vigil through the dark,
Of Sorrow's presence, deep, unfathomed, stark;
No goal in sight, and tears upon her cheek,
For they that see, have suffered and are meek.
